

Gordon Mitchell is Professor for Religion and Intercultural Education at the University of Hamburg, and is a member of the Hamburg Circle for Philosophising with Children (2000-2009). Prior to that he was director of Intercultural Resources, a Johannesburg based consultancy specialising in diversity education (1994-2000). He has been pastor, political activist, high school teacher, scullery hand, and finally senior lecturer in Religious Studies at the University of Cape Town (1989-1993). He studied at Rhodes University, the University of South Africa, and Heidelberg University. His research and teaching includes curriculum studies in religion, with particular attention to questions of human rights. Recent publications include:

Mitchell, G. et al. (2007). “Wenn wir die ganze Sache nicht machen würden, dann würde Gras darüber wachsen ...”. Deutsch-Jüdische Vergangenheit in interkulturellen Schulklassen. Frankfurt am Main: IKO Verlag.

Mitchell, Gordon (with Christa Dommel). 2008. Religion Education. On the Boundaries between Study of Religion, Education and Theologies: Jürgen Lott and the Bremen Approach in International Perspective. Bremen. Kleio Humanities.

Mitchell, Gordon (with Gertrud Yde Iversen and Gaynor Pollard). 2009. Hovering over the face of the deep. Philosophy and theology with children. Waxmann: Münster.